Geneva, Aug. 21.—The outstanding fact that Russia has once more her place among the nations as ld power. There is no getting around this truth any more. Prostion, apparently crased forever from the list of great powers. Russia has magi-cally regained her strength and sudden-

This resurrection has been wrought not by communist theories, but in spite of them—by bloody victories on the buttlefields of Siberia, Ukrainia, Caucasus and Poland. It is not Bolshevism that has revived Russia—Bolshevism that vism is bankrupt—but nationalism and military glory. Pacifists and parlor communists will do well to meditate

All over the world the friends of the great Russian people have been praying for Russia's resurrection. But w that it seems miraculously realized. is unfortunately impossible to hall with satisfaction. Russia comes if with satisfaction. Russia comes among the nations as a menace—a terrible dorble menace of world-revolution and world-conquest. Her coming apsets the new balance of nower in Europe created by the allied victory over Germany on which the world's hope of enduring peace was based. It over Germany on which the world's hope of enduring peace was based. It threatens to undermine the ill-estab-lished peace of Europe once more and to plunge the peoples into chaotic wars civil wars more destructive even and suicidal than the world war, which er have but just survived.

Government a Military Depotism Recent events have definitely unmasked the present Russian Govern-ment as a military despotism with a camouflaged communist civil admins-tration. To realize its imperialistic nims it has at its disposal three mighty forces — Pan-Slavism, Pan-Islamism and radical internationalism. Thus the new Russia is an infinitely more rmidable power than the old Russia of the czars, whose only instrument of moral conquest was Pan-Slavism, to nothing of the fact that all other uropean powers are reduced by war ir beneath the level of their former

In spite of internal disorganization. famine and plague, the new Russian empire, with its army of more than 1,000,000 fighters, led by bold comanders and backed by a ruthlessly esolute government satirically conemptuous of western pacifism, is a latch even for the victors of the orld war and an irresistible force for the vanquished and the weak new nations struggling for national ex-istence in the midst of European chaos.

Talk of Russia, Not Bolsheviki

In these circumstances it is natural enough that Russia—even Czarist exiles no longer speak of "the Bolshevists." but only of "Russia"—is rapidly regaining the deminating position which she occupied in eastern Europe of yore and which victory gave the Allies, who have not known how to keep it.

Inevitably the eastern border states

Rumania, not a Slav state, is in grave danger of being drawn into the circle of Russian influence, like Poland, by defeat and revolution, and already the Russian armies are gathering to break through Hungary into Austria, where their reception is being prepared by the Russian embassy just established in Vicana in defiance of Allied protests and the terms of the Saint forms in have not known how to keep it.
